Do you know what reiki is?

No

There are two parts of the body that help an animal heal itself the sympathetic system and the. One runs parasympathetic system the stress and fight and flight and the other relaxes the body. When an animal goes to sleep it give the body time to heal itself and the parasympathetic system can take over and help heal the body, letting the body rest and relax giving more energy and time for the body to heal itself another name for healing it relaxation techniques. We help the animal relax and sleep, which help abused or nervous animals trust but also helps the animal give the body time and opportunity to heal itself.

Ok here some other scenarios to help you understand what is going on with the dog when I heal it?

- It's like having a relaxing massage or spa day
- It's like having a relaxing snooze
- It's like meditation
- It's like coming from a warm relaxing bath with bubbles relaxing music and candle light with no outside noised or problem to disturb you

Ok so picture this?:....

Just imagine the coming out of a relaxing spa day or a lovely warm bath with bubble relaxing music and all your favoured relaxation and "me" time treats wrapped in the biggest warmest fluffiest towels and sitting in a warm hot room with relaxing dimmed lights. Their nothing to go to or to disturb you, you could have been in that bath for ages you could sit there in you towel for ages and you feel warm and fresh and health and happy. No worries and all your problems physical and mentally are gone for now!
